

Police officers in riot gear control a crowd of protesters during a demonstration

written by Chandradip News | August 14, 2024

The police officers in riot gear were seen controlling a crowd of protesters during a demonstration. The officers were wearing helmets and shields, and some were holding batons. The protesters were shouting and some were holding signs. The scene was chaotic and the police were trying to maintain order. The demonstration was held in a public square and many people were gathered there. The police officers were seen in the foreground, and the protesters were in the background. The scene was captured by a camera and the image is shown here.

The police officers in riot gear were seen controlling a crowd of protesters during a demonstration. The officers were wearing helmets and shields, and some were holding batons. The protesters were shouting and some were holding signs. The scene was chaotic and the police were trying to maintain order. The demonstration was held in a public square and many people were gathered there. The police officers were seen in the foreground, and the protesters were in the background. The scene was captured by a camera and the image is shown here.

The police officers in riot gear were seen controlling a crowd of protesters during a demonstration. The officers were wearing helmets and shields, and some were holding batons. The protesters were shouting and some were holding signs. The scene was chaotic and the police were trying to maintain order. The demonstration was held in a public square and many people were gathered there. The police officers were seen in the foreground, and the protesters were in the background. The scene was captured by a camera and the image is shown here.

