The meeting between the two world leaders, held in a formal setting, focused on the ongoing conflict in Ukraine. Biden expressed the United States' commitment to supporting Ukraine's sovereignty and territorial integrity. He emphasized the need for a diplomatic solution and the importance of international law. Putin, on the other hand, reiterated his position on the situation in Ukraine, suggesting that the conflict is a result of NATO's expansion and the need for a new security architecture in the region.

Biden stated that the U.S. will continue to provide military and economic aid to Ukraine, while also seeking to de-escalate tensions. He said, "We are committed to a peaceful resolution of the conflict in Ukraine, but we will not back down on our principles." Putin responded by saying that Russia is open to dialogue but only if the West shows a willingness to negotiate on an equal footing.

The discussion also touched upon broader geopolitical issues, including the role of the United Nations and the impact of the conflict on global energy markets. Biden stressed the importance of maintaining a strong alliance with NATO and other international partners. Putin mentioned the need for a multipolar world order and the role of Russia in maintaining global stability.
