WhatsApp has announced a new security feature called 'Two-Factor Authentication' (2FA) that will allow users to protect their accounts with a second layer of security. This feature is designed to prevent unauthorized access to a user's account, even if their phone is lost or stolen. The feature will be available to all users starting in early 2025.

WhatsApp 'Two-Factor Authentication' Feature

The new feature, known as 'Two-Factor Authentication' (2FA), will require users to provide a second layer of security in addition to their password. This second layer will be a six-digit code that is generated by the app and sent to the user's phone via SMS or a voice call. This code will be required to log in to the app, even if the user's phone is lost or stolen. The feature will be available to all users starting in early 2025.
